Another Storm Wave Coming.

The last storm period of the month begins about the 26th, and ends about the 30th. During its existence the regular changes in temperature, barometric pressure, wind currents and all phenomena belonging to a regular storm period, will show themselves, require progressive order. All who have been for any time careful students of nature, or who have followed our forecasts and instructions for only a limited time, have discovered that extreme western storms, as a rule, get all the phases of storm periods earlier than central, southern and eastern parts of the continent. This is especially true in reference to the cold waves that rush in from the northwest as sequels to almost every storm period. When storms of an equatorial origin dominate a period, the south has rain, wind and thunder, with only the cold wave feature in the north and west. All these facts are replete with interesting study, besides the practical relation they bear to the well and comfort of man and beast. January is apt to end fair and frosty. February ushers in the equinox of Mars, and leads forward to planetary combinations, which will reach a cri-

Mr. Morgan has made one or two maiden efforts in the Legislature, but as a rule has had the good judgment to let others do the talking. His seat is over by the wall to the right of the Speaker and the fact that his desk is next Mr. Finley, who is the ablest Republican in the House, probably has something to do with the fairly good start Mr. Morgan is making.

The Fast Mail.

A production of unusual magnitude will be given at the Opera House to-morrow evening, Lincoln J. Carter's superb scenic melodrama "The Fast Mail." As its name indicates, it deals largely with the railroads in its incidents, but it presents an abundance of effects that are daring in their magnitude and admirable in their execution. The stambour is said to be a wonder of clever conception and masterly mechanical work, and the railroad scene, with its train going at a terrific rate of speed, makes the stage seem like a piece of reality. The Niagara Falls scene is wonderfully beautiful, and it may safely be said is more elaborate than anything of the kind ever before attempted in this city.—There are a multitude of minor effects that contribute to make the performance a revelation of realism. The whistles, bells and splashing are heard as the boat leaves the wharf. The sound that tells us of an approaching train heralds the approach of the freight and the fast mail train—the latter rushing by with people gazing from the window at the heroine who has just saved her lover's life by fastening a letter to the mail pouch. The roaring of Niagara Falls is heard, and the mist that rises from it is shown vividly. The play is under the personal direction of L. J. Carter, the author. The cast is said to be a capable one. The play is starting at times in the intensity of its climaxes, and these, when presented with all the effects of the intricate stage settings, bring the interest to a degree that is rarely attained even in the melodrama. A large number of people are employed in the production, which is in many particulars plainly the result of care and skill combined.
